SSU student crossing Route 13 hit by an automobile

by MaryBeth Vanston, staff writer

SSU Senior Joan Fritz was hit by a taxi cab on the morning of Tuesday, May 5 as she was crossing Route 13. She was not seriously injured.

Fritz, who was on her way to an 11 am class, did not use the pedestrian crosswalk, but crossed the highway near the entrance of the Chesapeake lot.

She, like many other SSU students, had trouble finding a parking space so late in the morning. As a result, even though Fritz had purchased a parking sticker, she resorted to parking in the vacant lot across Rt. 13.

As Fritz crossed the busy highway a taxi cab driving southbound hit her, knocking her to the ground.

Friends that were with Fritz helped her to her feet. The taxi driver pulled over and asked if she was all right. Dazed and confused, Joan responded that she was okay. The taxi driver then drove off.

Fritz then proceeded to class, where upon she realized the seriousness of the incident. Her professor called Public Safety, who then escorted her to the Student Health Center.

Fritz's right leg was bruised and cut up. She needed to have a pebble removed from her knee. As she was still in shock from the accident, it was advised that she go to the hospital to receive a more thorough examination.

The Maryland State Police met Fritz at the hospital and questioned her about the accident.

The officers explained to Fritz that tracking down the driver might be difficult. They also said that they might not be able to charge him with a Hit and Run since he did pull over after the accident.

Fritz did not sustain any serious injuries and is feeling fine, aside from being a little shook up over the whole incident.

Public Safety explained that since the accident did not occur on University property, it was out of their jurisdiction.

Director of Public Safety Jim Phillips explained that Public Safety officers have jurisdiction over any property that is owned, operated or leased by the University.

If there were an accident on the Rt. 13 pedestrian crosswalk, that would be out of Public Safety's jurisdiction. Anything on Rt. 13, for that matter, would be also. The planned underpass will, however, fall under SSU Public Safety jurisdiction.

Fourth annual undergraduate research symposium to be held at SSU

by Janet Scouten, staff writer

Is there a relationship between weather and crime? Should nurses wear only white, or can they wear multicolored uniforms? What kind of public support is there for planned growth for the city of Salisbury?

These, plus many other questions, will be answered at the Richard A. Henson School of Science and Technology Fourth Annual Undergraduate Research Symposium.

On Friday, May 13 approximately 50 SSU undergraduates will report on their findings after a semester or more of research in the disciplines of biology, chemistry, literature, mathematics, geography and regional planning, physics, nursing and health sciences.

The symposium, which in the past has focused only on the sciences, has been opened up to SSU's Honors Program. Senior honors students were invited to present their theses. However, only two out of the five chose to participate in the symposium.

SSU honors student Surai Thaneemil will present The Tuberculosis Trend: Regression and Time Series Analysis.

Honors student George Scouten will present Walt Whitman's Presence in the Poetry of Langston Hughes. His will be the only non-science related presentation at this year's symposium.

Director of the Honors Program Tony Whall said he hopes that in the future the symposium will be a campus wide event, involving all the schools.

Associate professor of mathematics Kathleen Shannon also expressed the hope that "next year, every school will have a symposium."

"It's impressive as a faculty member to see the kind of research students have done," she said.

Symposia like this are traditionally reserved for graduate students and established researchers. According to Shannon, this kind of university undergraduate symposium "is unique to SSU. I haven't seen anything of its kind at other universities."

The symposium is open to the public.

It will begin at 3:30 pm in Devilbiss Hall, Room 149. Opening remarks will be made by Phil Creighton, dean of the Henson School, and Kathleen Shannon, who is the chair of the committee coordinating the symposium.

Concurrent sessions featuring student research are from 4 to 5:20 pm and 5:30 to 7:10 pm in the Nanticoke and Pocomoke rooms in the Guerrieri University Center. A reception will follow in the University Center first floor lounge.

SSU installs new recycling bins

by Garrett McGlothlin, staff writer

Salisbury State, the university hell bent on keeping students on the cutting edge of recycling, has introduced yet another innovation. Outdoor recycling containers have been placed around the campus for the collection of aluminum cans and glass bottles.

The recycling containers were installed on May 3 along the walkways students take to get to class.

The big, gray containers are made from 660 pounds of reinforced concrete, and have the distinctive green Salisbury State recycling symbol emblazoned into the side wall.

"These new recycling canisters rock!," said Freshman Agnes Patkowski.

"I like them, they make it convenient to recycle," said Allison Frame, junior.

Rick Shaw, student recycling foreman, said, "We saw a lot of cans and recyclable materials sitting in the trash around campus, so we saw the need for the containers."

The University already has recycling facilities located near most of the residence halls, inside the academic buildings and throughout the University Center.

Director of Horticulture Les Lutz had hoped that students would hold onto their recyclables until they could deposit them into a recycling bin. But that didn't work.

"We had been looking into outdoor containers for a couple of years," said Shaw. They talked to other universities around the east coast before setting up the new program.

"We wanted [the containers]

Graduate schools are increasingly competitive

by College Press Service

Each year, more and more students are applying to graduate schools only to face increasingly slimmer chances for acceptance.

The harsh realities of limited job opportunities has prompted record numbers of students to pursue advanced degrees. Now, many outstanding college seniors who would have had little trouble being admitted to top graduate programs a few years ago are being turned down cold.

David Nall, a senior at Rollins College in Winter Park, Fla., is one such student. Nall has a 3.93 GPA and GRE scores totaling 2230. He designed a rigorous combined major for himself in art, philosophy, music an English, and is considered an exceptional student by his professors.

"I applied to philosophy Ph.D programs at six grad schools: Harvard, Berkeley, Stanford, MIT, Chicago and Northwestern," he says. "All of them rejected me."

Stanford, he was told, has six openings for more than 200 applicants.

Nall is not alone. Even though growing numbers are applying to graduate school, available spaces for these students have increased only slightly, if at all.

"From 1986 to 1992, graduate school applications increased at a rate of seven percent per year, and in some cases even higher," says Peter Syverson, director of information services for the Council of Graduate Schools. "Enrollment has gone up two percent per year overall. If applications go up faster than enrollment, institutions become more selective."

"Most attribute this (increase) to the economy. As the job market for new graduates closed, many students looked to continuing their education as a way of increasing their competitive edge while riding out the economic recession...Bad economic times are very good for graduate schools in terms of student demand."

Graduate degrees also are becoming required credentials for career advancement in many settings such as high school teaching, public administration, social work and nursing, Syverson notes.

Last fall results of an annual survey of more than 220,000 freshmen, conducted by UCLA's Higher Education Research Institute, showed a record 65 percent said they were interested in attending graduate school, a 10 percent jump from 1992.

"There's also a higher percentage of women coming into college intending to pursue graduate and professional study, and I think that may be feeding the increased admissions as well," says David Merkiowitz, director of public affairs for the American Council on Education, sponsor of the survey.

Some areas of graduate study are increasing faster than others. Syverson cites humanities is increasing at 12 percent annually, public administration at 11 percent, and social sciences at 10 percent.

Only one area has shown a decrease. "In the last year we've seen decreases in business applications, and that was expected because the number of students taking the GMAT test has gone down each year for the past two or three years," he said. "The MBA is not the hot ticket it once was in the '80s."

This demand, coupled with financial cutbacks, has led many schools to actually extend fewer offers for admission because more students may accept than the schools can handle.

At Duke University in North Carolina, Donna Giles, assistant dean and director of Graduate Admissions, reports receiving about 6,600 applications in 1994, up 10 percent from 1993.

"We don't expect to admit any more students just because the pool increased," she says. "We offer admission to fewer than 500, but the incoming class usually is between 525 and 550."

However, this year Giles says some "severe financial cutbacks" may impact admissions offers, which usually are three times higher than the desired enrollment number.

"I predict the number of offers may decrease because funds have been cut and departments are not taking as many risks. They can't afford to take the chance that more than one-third would say yes," she said.

The situation at University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is similar, according to Myrna Bower, director of the Graduate School.

"Extending offers is really a game of chance. We got burned in English three years ago when the national picture looked bleak...the department extended the usual number of offers, only this time 70 to 80 percent (instead of the usual 50 percent) said they were coming and it put them in a dither for the year," she said. So far this year UNC has received over 13,000 applications, an increase of more than 900 from 1993. They plan to admit 1,500 to 1,700 students.

Bower has sympathy for the dilemma of students as competition shuts them out.

"I feel terrible... these are somebody's children we are turning away. Often, they are really good students, but the competition is so tough," she said. "In philosophy you practically have to walk on water to get in."

For example, Bower said there are 222 applications for five slots in 1994. In 1993, applicant's average GRE scores were 729 verbal, 717 quantitative, and 739 analytical with a 3.75 GPA in their major. Psychology has 883 applicants for 26 slots; history has 663 applications for 28 slots.

At some larger state universities, economic cutbacks have decreased financial assistance for students, making it harder for some to attend even if they are accepted.

At Ohio State University, where 11,000 students are enrolled in 115 graduate programs, both applications and enrollment have shown a gradual increase since 1988. The one exception was last year, when a new application fee may have caused a slight decrease in inquiries, according to Paul Isaac, associate dean of the Graduate School.

However, due to the

There are currently nine of the containers around campus. Eventually there will be 12.

The cans have a removable plastic liner that makes the use of plastic bags unnecessary.

In a random telephone survey of 10 students, seven said that they had already used them, two said that they would use them and one student said that he hadn't noticed the gray containers.

"It's good that they exist," said Senior Neil Carr. "But I want to know whose idea it was to make them look like the bottoms of giant columns."

Another student, who wished to remain anonymous, said, "I hate them, I hate everything about them. I hate the environment, it sucks."

Mike O'Connor, who has been responsible for collecting the recyclables from the new containers, said that so far the containers are successful.

"Don't throw any garbage in there," he said.

"The outdoor bins have the potential to raise the recycling rate about four or five percent, if participation is strong," said Shaw.

Graduate schools competitive

loss of some graduate assistant slots, more graduates students than ever are having to go to school part time.

At UCLA, applications have dropped slightly going against the national trend, says Ellen Benkin, who coordinates data for the Graduate School. She says the decrease likely is because of California's ailing economy, an 18 percent increase in tuition, and a decrease in the number of staff positions available for graduates, which all affect the students' ability to pay tuition. Nevertheless, odds for admission are not great—approximately 16,000 applicants for 2,500 openings.

At Ivy League schools like Princeton, the competition has always been tough, but now it is even more so.

Dave Redmond, acting dean of the Graduate School, says Princeton has experienced a five percent increase in applications this year. And, other than a small decline last year, applications have been slowly increasing over the last several years.

"This year we had 7,000 applications and admitted about 900 of those students and hope to enroll about 460 to 465 new graduate students," he said.

Like other universities, Princeton is not immune to budget constraints. Redmond says that may "have to tighten up a bit this year, seeking a smaller class by about 10 or 12 people. He attributes this to a "small cut in fellowship budgets," and cautious attitudes in engineering and science departments because of "the uncertainty of outside support, which they draw from to support their students."

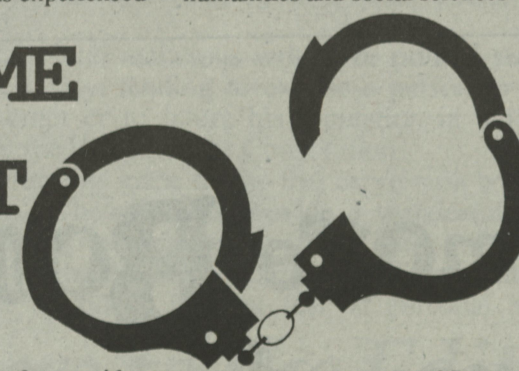

Princeton, too, has extended fewer offers for the last several years in some of the humanities and social sciences departments. "We've called it 'overachievement,'" explains Redmond. "Students have accepted at a higher rate than our previous years' figures would have led us to believe and even when we made some corrections for the next year, it's happened again. So we've really kind of screwed things down a bit tighter in the number of offers we have made."

"...The selections are always very painful because there are some very well qualified people who just won't make the cut..."

David Nall is now one of those who knows that pain of rejection well. "It was a numbing experience," says Nall, who is re-evaluating his options. "I plan to work, save money and reapply next year, perhaps to different grad schools where I won't be facing such enormous odds—if there are any schools like that."

Speak out for Free Speech

As Voltaire said "I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." As American citizens, our right to free speech is protected by the First Amendment to the Constitution, guaranteeing the right of every American to say what he or she thinks, even if those thoughts are damaging or reprehensible.

Allowing students to express themselves freely was the primary goal in establishing the "Express Yourself" boards outside of the Campus Post Office. Although we as an educated body of people may find some of the thoughts expressed on these boards offensive, we do not have the right to censor them. Such censorship would not only be patronizing to the student body, since it assumes that they cannot discern between "good" and "bad" ideas, but takes away the constitutional rights of the students who spoke out in the first place. If students are to be protected from bad ideas, how are they going to learn to identify and cope with them? Sending such ideas underground simply makes them stronger and more dangerous.

As responsible members of a modern democratic society we are morally bound to protect our First Amendment rights. The loss of these rights would serve to debase the entire foundation of our ideology. However, as American Citizens, as intelligent caring human beings, we are morally obligated to denounce expressions of hate and cruelty. The First Amendment protects the right to speak out against hate, just as it protects the right of people to express hatred in the first place.

However:

Slander - "The utterance in the presence of another person of a false statement or statements, damaging to a third person's character or reputation" and Libel - "Any false and malicious written or printed statement, or any sign, picture or effigy, tending to expose a person to public ridicule, hatred, or contempt or to injure his reputation in any way," are not protected within the United States Constitution.

Libelous statements made on the free expression boards could cause us to lose them. These boards provide a wonderful opportunity for SSU students to express themselves freely without fear of reprimand. However, we all should also be able to participate and learn from the ideas expressed by others without fear of personal attack or harm.

Sincerely,

Lauren Weis

Wrongful Punishment

I think that the Ronald Price incident was blown way out of proportion. I think that it's a gross miscarriage of justice that the former Annapolis social studies teacher received a 26 year sentence for having tooled several of his female students.

Ronald Price did not, in anything I have ever read on the subject, physically assault any of his students. Neither did he rape, sexually assault, nor forcefully or offensively touch any of them. In fact, what he did do would have been completely legal if the girls were two or three years older.

The only thing that I feel that Price did wrong was having taken part in a conflict of interest. He misused his position to (non-coersively) persuade several female students to sleep with him. At worst, this behavior should have resulted in his termination and possible disbarment from the teaching profession. His 26 year prison sentence, and all the appeals that can result from it, may cost Maryland taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Isn't it about time that we as a society stopped clinging to our purposeless and outdated Victorian-age statutory rape laws?

Sincerely,
Todd Yacovone

Does WSUR discriminate?

On April 30, 1994 the campus radio station WSUR presented its 2nd annual Gullapalooza exhibition, a benefit concert showcasing various talent from the local area and other parts of the state. About seven bands were present at the all day event. At about 4 pm, I walked over to the dining hall from Chesapeake Hall to see how the day was going and found that the turn out was surprisingly large. But I was dismayed as usual to see that the event had attracted less than five black people. And some of them were school employees who had to be there. It seems that no matter how much pleading, imploring, yelling or demanding the black students do, we will never get proper representation from the student run radio station on campus. For the past two years now, we have been fighting this issue out. And I suppose some members of the WSUR staff thought we would simply go away. But the fact is that every year the black population of Salisbury State grows a little more. So, here we go again! Down the very same road until we can get it right.

Now as a black student on campus and a fan of real Hip-Hop music, I don't feel like hearing any more excuses about why there is nothing on the station for me. Don't tell me about some vote you had two years ago. Don't tell me about how professional you

by Kate Spinner

There are so many detergents, household cleaners and pest repellents on the market today, it is difficult to choose one from the other. Most of these items that you can buy in the grocery store are loaded with countless chemicals that are harmful to people, pets and the Earth. Cleaning chemicals get flushed down the drain into septic tanks or sewage treatment plants where they can leech through the soil and into groundwater. Chemicals are also released in the air or absorbed through your skin.

Avoiding toxic, corrosive and flammable household products sounds difficult, but all you really need to know is how to combine a few common items that you may already have in your kitchen. Baking soda, hand soap or soap flakes, vinegar, lemon juice and vegetable oil are all basic cleaning ingredients. Some other less familiar products are Borax and washing soda; both can be found at your local grocery store.

If you get a chance one weekend, gather some clean empty spray bottles and create your own cleansers, bug repellents and laundry detergent. Or you can just throw some ingredients together and start your spring cleaning.

Washing dishes: Dish washing liquids are often petroleum based, non-biodegradable, and full of artificial fragrances and colors. Instead: Use liquid hand soap and for heavy grease and grime add two or three tablespoons of vinegar. For automatic dishwashers use one part Borax and one part washing soda.

Laundry: Laundry detergents are usually non-biodegradable, and some contain phosphates. Phosphates leech into water bodies like the Chesapeake Bay and contribute to algae blooms which deplete oxygen from water. Wash clothes with a cup of soap flakes. Washing soda can be used to brighten clothes.

Fleas and ticks: Feed your animals two tablespoons of Brewer's Yeast and one clove of garlic daily. Also use a pet dip that contains de-limonine gas (derived from citrus extracts), or use an insecticidal soap. Insecticidal soaps are safe, biodegradable, and kill fleas, ticks and lice instantly. After washing your pet spray him/her with rosemary water. Combine 1/2 cup fresh or dried rosemary and one quart of boiling water. Steep for 20 minutes. Strain out the liquid and store it in a spray bottle. It is also a good idea to sprinkle Pyrethrin powder or crushed chrysanthemums on your carpet before vacuuming.

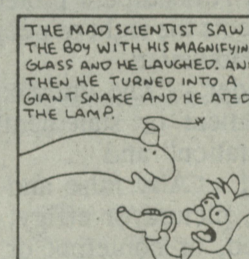

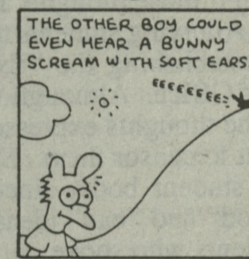

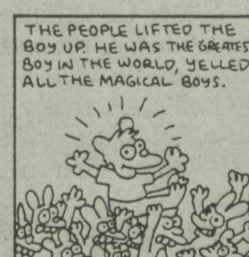

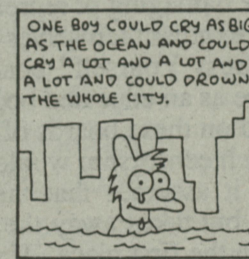

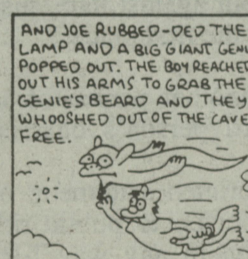

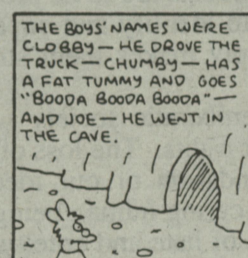

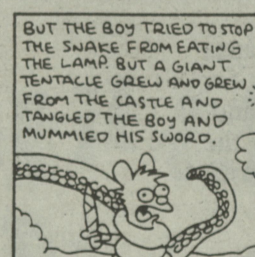

Mosquitoes and gnats: Burn citronella candles, plant sweet basil or bayberry. To make a spray for yourself, mix six cloves of garlic, one minced onion and one tablespoon of soap in a gallon of hot water. Allow the mixture to sit one to two days. Strain the liquid out into a spray bottle.

Ants: Sprinkle cream of tartar, red chili powder, dried peppermint or boric acid wherever ants enter the house.

Cockroaches and silverfish: A mixture of powdered sugar and baking soda

Heidi Chronicles performed by Theater

by Jim Hudson, staff writer

No, it's not a story about a prostitute, and it's not the tale of a little girl from the Swiss Alps! Instead, it's The Heidi Chronicles, SSU's final theatre presentation of the semester.

Wendy Wasserstein's Pulitzer Prize-winning comedy was the first original play written by a woman to win the Tony Award. Written in 1989, The Heidi Chronicles is a modern play for modern audiences.

According to critic Gerald Weales, "The Heidi of the title is an art historian, an intelligent and sensitive woman who moves from 1965 to 1989," picking her way through the ideological thickets of those years, "only to find that the goal of her generation, to become an independent woman in a male world, brings emptiness with it."

The play follows Heidi around the world to places such as New York, California, Chicago and England. It focuses on Heidi's interactions with her friends and her quest for personal fulfillment. The production tackles many of the issues which are important to our generation today: homosexuality, AIDS and women's rights.

The message of the play, however, is presented in a comedic manner. It's "full of gags that skewer everything from consciousness-raising groups to power lunches to TV talk shows," praises critic Jack Kroll.

"It's not your normal play," says Cynthia Lasner, director. This is Lasner's directorial debut. She urges college students especially to come to this production, "It's great for people our age. A lot of the ideas relate to me and to our generation."

Lasner warns that The Heidi Chronicles is a frank, honest presentation of modern culture. Anyone who might be offended by adult language should take note.

The talent-packed cast is led by Tricia Sherrer in the title role. Amy Black plays Heidi's best female friend, Susan. The men in her life are Scoop, a philandering lawyer, editor and politician, portrayed by John Warren, and Peter, a gay pediatrician, played by Lee Stanford. Set design is by Bill Magee; lighting design is by Joe Hopkins.

This production marks a special milestone in the history of Sophanes, SSU's student theatre organization. This year is the 60th anniversary of the drama association, one of the oldest extant campus organizations. The Heidi Chronicles is acted, directed and designed totally by

by Jennifer Evans, staff writer

To continue with our never ending goal of telling about things to do in Salisbury, here is the latest addition.

On Friday, May 13, the Salisbury State Program Board will be offering two drive-in movies on campus. Actually, it's not really a drive-in, it's more of a sit-in.

That's right, grab your blankets and beach towels and head on out to the grassy area by Wicomico Hall and the dining hall at 8 pm on Friday and settle in for some fun.

The two movies that will be showing on a large screen in front of Devilbiss Hall will be Mrs. Doubtfire and Friday the 13th Part I.

SSPB member Rob Ennamorato was in charge of selecting the movies for the evening. "I wanted something funny, and of course the scary movie speaks for itself since it will be on Friday the 13th," said Ennamorato.

University Dining Services will be selling refreshments for all of the hungry movie goers so don't forget your change. Ennamorato requests that students do not bring lawn chairs because it might block the view of others sitting behind you.

If it should rain, the movie will be moved inside of Maggs Gym, but will start at the same time.

Crutches Suck: Keep your shoes on by Lauren "I feel like the Grinch who stole summer" Weiss, staff writer

Summer's here, or at least it feels like it. There's no other time of year when we can run around barefoot and nearly naked and not get strange looks from people we pass on the street.

Although summer is one of the most free and enjoyable seasons, it can also be one of the most dangerous, filled with hidden hazards. I should know, I've been walking around on crutches for the last week because of one.

Nothing feels better on a 95 degree day than splashing around in the water with some friends, but lurking beneath the sparkling surface of that lake, river or stream can be any number of dangers.

Bare feet are prime targets for rocks, submerged sticks and the human pollution that ends up in our waterways.

Broken glass, rusty cans, wires or discarded hypodermic needles can all cause extremely painful wounds, especially when inflicted on the feet.

Wear protective footwear when wading or swimming in natural waterways. OK, stop picturing those hip boots your Uncle Bob wears during trout season, I'm talking about just an old pair of athletic shoes or waterproof sandals such as Teva's or flip flops.

"HEALTH NOTES"

by Joy Marowski, Linda Lombardi, and Martha Lewis

Here are a few tips to help you have a safe and healthy summer...

- * Keep your body hydrated. Drink 8 cups of water a day, if you can.
- * Eat right. (Focus on fruits and veggies and stay away from heavy meals.)
- * Try to exercise in the early morning or late afternoon, when the sun is not as hot.
- * If you need to exercise during the hotter part of the day (between 10 am & 3pm), make sure you use sun block, wear light clothing, and follow the above tips.
- * After a full day out in the sun, make sure to keep your skin moistened by using oil-based lotions.
- * During the summer months, moisturizing your body is a key factor in reducing aging.
- * Take care of your scalp by using a less abrasive shampoo, if needed.
- * Keep your hair nourished by using special conditioners and hot oil treatments, as hair tends to get drier in the summertime. (Special shampoos and conditioners are also available for those who do a lot of swimming.)
- * Keep your lips moist by using an oil-free lip balm—for example, Chapstick with sunblock. (Be sure to stay away from lip ointments with alcohol in the ingredients—using these products makes your lips feel tingly and good, but in the long run they are actually drying them and making you need to use the product more often—for example, Blistex.)
- * Remember to protect your eyes by wearing sunglasses whenever you're in the sun. (Make sure to bring your drops to the beach to moisturize your eyes throughout the day)
- * Make sure to keep your ears dry after swimming, to decrease your chances of an ear infection.
- * To help decrease your risk of athlete's foot, make sure to change your socks a couple times a day, depending how much your feet sweat.
- * Remember to bring sandals to the beach to wear on the hot sand and pavement.
- * Rinse out and dry your bathing suit after every use.
- * And don't forget these infamous burning areas that always seem to be forgotten:
 - eyelids
 - back of your neck
 - nose
 - scalp (especially for men with crew cuts or thinning hair)
 - tops of your feet
 - ankles
 - behind your knees

Have a safe and fun summer!

any shoes). Swimming, though lots of fun and great exercise, can also be dangerous if not taken seriously. Never, ever swim after consuming alcohol, this goes for driving a boat as well.

One of the most common drowning victims is a "tired swimmer," one who does not have enough strength to hold themselves above the water. A drunk swimmer usually equals a tired swimmer, so be smart and swim sober.

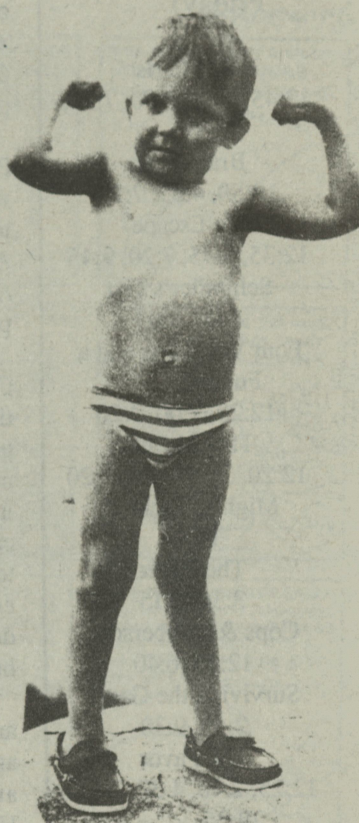

Alcohol + sun also equals an increased risk for heat stroke, so if you're going to lay out at the beach or the pool, drink lots of water and leave those beers behind.

A common misconception about sun exposure is that people who burn easily have a higher risk of skin cancer than those who tan. In actuality, risk of skin cancer is linked to overall sun exposure, so the person who lies in the sun for five hours a week and has a beautiful bronze tan is just as much at risk for skin cancer and other dermatological problems as the person who burns after an hour in the sun.

So, even if you tan well wear some type of sun screen, level two is better than none at all. Skin cancer is one of the fastest spreading types of cancers and strikes those of all ages.

Don't get me wrong, summer especially is a time to get

Avoiding "summertime blues"

by Ali Moyer, staff writer

With summer just around the corner students are beginning to make plans for their long awaited break. To their disappointment, most students end up spending the majority of the summer working.

Many students opt for living in Ocean City and enjoying the beach while making a little bit of money. Those of us more hard up for cash, however, usually end up moving back home to wait tables, work at a store in the local mall, or mow lawns.

Another option for students is taking classes over summer term. By taking a class over break, an additional three credits can be eliminated from a fall or spring semester course load.

Although most of our summers will be spent in the usual hum-drum way, there are some students on campus who will be doing some interesting things this summer.

Baseball stays even with doubleheader split

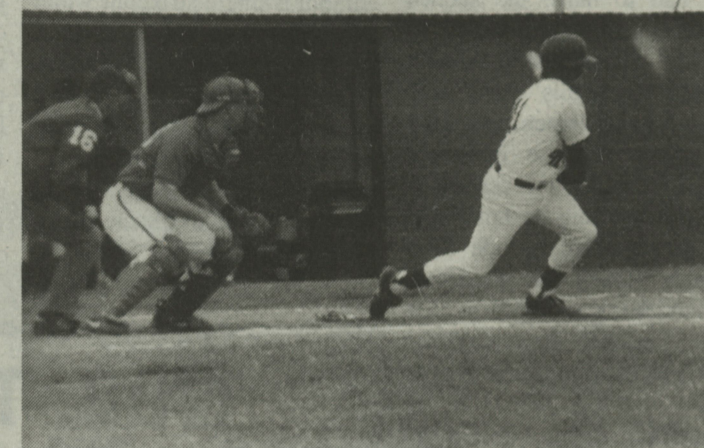

by Josh LeBaron, staff writer

The conditions were far from ideal as the Salisbury State University men's baseball team (16-16) split a double header with York College (18-19) with a constant drizzle falling and chilly 50 degree temperatures.

SSU lost the first game of the afternoon 14-3. Jonathon Joines hit a two run homer for SSU, but it was a case of too little, too late. Mike Sullivan recorded the loss for the Gulls and John Hihn got the win for York.

SSU turned it around in the second game and played solidly as they won 5-3.

York went up early, taking a 1-0 lead on a solo home run by Jon Benchick in the second inning. In the third, SSU came up with rally to take the lead 2-1. A double by Damon Garrison scored Bill Fenley to make it 1-1. Garrison then stole third and an RBI single by Jonathon Joines put SSU on top.

The fourth inning saw York go up on another home run by Benchick. This time it was a two run shot making the score 3-2 York.

In the fifth, Mike Franklin put SSU ahead for good with a two run home run scoring Garrison who had hit a single.

SSU got one more run in the sixth when a bunt by Dave Shull scored Mike Brogden, making the score 5-3. The lead was held for the remainder of the game.

Bill DeAtley was the winning pitcher for SSU. York's Brian Reynolds got the loss.

Salisbury will be playing NC Wesleyan at home on May 11. Besides make-up games, that is their last scheduled game. At 16-16, the last couple of games could yield the Gulls a winning record.

Men's lacrosse eyes home playoff game

by Mike Beardslee, staff writer

On April 30 the Salisbury State men's lacrosse team boosted their record to 13-0 by defeating West Chester, 22-7. The win also marks the finish of SSU's second straight undefeated regular season and extends their streak to 36 straight wins in regular season play.

SSU's Jason Coffman led the way with seven goals and four assists while Paul Smith had 5 goals and Sean Radebaugh had three goals.

SSU held a 69-35 advantage in ground balls and a 22-10 advantage in face-offs. In the crease SSU also played well as goalie Erik Miller stopped eight shots while Russ Hewitt stopped four and Tom Murrell stopped two.

Sophomore Jason

Coffman is closing in on Rick Berkman's single season goal record of 61. He currently has 56, and postseason stats count, so look for him to break the record in the first or second game of the playoffs.

SSU is slated to host the first round of the playoffs on May 15, and will probably be matched against Washington College. The pairings were announced too late to be included in this edition.

Should the Gulls wind up hosting in the first round, SSU students will need to buy tickets for the game. Tickets will probably be on sale prior to the game, and should cost around $3-4.

This could be the Gull's last home game, so come out and support their drive for a national championship.

Rugby club finishes spring season

by Josh LeBaron, staff writer

The Salisbury State University men's rugby club recently wrapped up another excellent season, posting a 4-2 record this spring.

After a brilliant 8-1 fall season, the team came through with some huge wins this semester.

SSU started out by beating King Island Men's Club 15-12. Next, they made quick work of Air Force, crushing them 30-0.

A 15-12 loss to the Columbia Men's Club did not seem to dampen spirits at all as SSU took on Towson State's Division I team and destroyed them 38-3.

SSU then put another huge win under their belts as they defeated Rutgers University, also a Division I team, by a score of 10-5. And in the final game of the season, SSU lost to George Mason.

Beating teams like Rutgers and Towson State, who have scholarship athletes, is quite an accomplishment. Division I schools can award scholarships, but the players here are giving their all everyday just because they enjoy it. It really says something about the dedication of the players and the club.

Three players from SSU were selected to various all-star May 10/ Issue 22 teams. Josh Stallings and Tim Reading were both selected for the developmental stage team for the state of Maryland. Mike Stevens was selected to men's clubs in order for us to kick more butt the next fall season. The part I like best is the club's laid-back attitude. We are not a factory trying to play. We are big kids having fun. At first it looks confusing, but all the big hits the P.R.U. Collegiate team for the state of Maryland which recently won an East Coast rugby tournament.

As far as the season went, Stevens said, "The spring season is scheduled to be a difficult one. This is where we play higher division teams and make it an exciting adventure every season."

Contributing scorers for this season were Dave Colli, Bill Gates, Dennis Provencher, Mike Stevens and Josh Stallings.

The fall season looks promising as well, as the squad stands to lose just one player. However, Josh Stallings will be replaced by Chad Newcomer, who is returning from a leave of absence. Look for the SSU men's rugby club to knock some heads and win some matches next fall.

The Rugby squad battles for possession.

Softball finishes season; looks to next year

by Joe Herman, staff writer

The Salisbury State women's softball team recently wrapped up the season with a combined record of 12-15. Although it wasn't a winning season it was a building season with highlights of many good things to come.

In her first year as head coach, Deanna Parks was content with the season as a whole, but is looking forward to having an opportunity to recruit new players and start the returning players on a year-round conditioning program devised by head trainer, Pat Lamboni.

Although this year has had it's ups and downs, the team's five starting freshmen gained a lot of experience that should pay dividends next year. "There were a couple games where we got down and lost because of a lack of experience and confidence," said Parks. "But we still didn't give up and finished the season on a positive note by defeating nationally ranked Montclair State."

The Sea Gulls graduate only two seniors this year, but both Diane Racine and Shannon Cianelli will be hard to replace.

Racine batted .374 with nine RBIs, five doubles, two triples, and was a perfect 13-13 in stolen base attempts. "Diane was our offensive spark," said Parks. "She always hit the ball real hard, had lots of quickness and was a leader on the field."

Cianelli compiled a .372 batting average with 12 RBIs, two doubles, and was also perfect in base stealing attempts with 10-10. "She hit the ball really hard and has raised her average by two hundred points from last year," said Parks. "like Diane she has also succeeded academically over the past four years and plans to attend graduate school."

SSU will also have the luxury of returning both freshmen pitchers, Tracy

Layfield and Traci Coleman who have had to make the sudden transition from high school to college. "Both pitchers really matured a lot this year," said Parks. "As freshmen they were both thrown into the fire where they had to adjust very quickly."

Other starting freshmen that will be returning include Kara Burman (.328) at shortstop, Michelle Brosius (.267) at first base, catcher Becky Keller (.434) and at second base Nicole Urban (.400) who is a sophomore. "This infield is young and talented, plus they gained a lot of experience this year which makes me hopeful for the future," added Parks.

Other players that will be returning include, juniors Marlene Oltman (.400), Laura Heath (.268), freshman Sherri Schmitz (.214), sophomore Jen Bowman (.372), junior Heather McIntosh, and sophomore Penny Lynch.

Some of the highlights of the season include: Becky

Keller, who had 83 at-bats without a single strikeout while knocking in a team high 31 RBIs. Nicole Urban had three triples in one game, and sophomore Jen Bowman (who had two home runs this season) made a game saving catch where she dove over the backstop to help defeat Montclair State.

Parks hopes that next year they will be able to play more games during the season and over spring break. "Taking two weeks off over spring break really hurt us this year," said Parks. "Next year hopefully we'll have a tournament where we can get some extra games in, which should help us be more competitive in our conference."

Gull Takes Softball

On Sunday, May 1, the S.S.U. softball team defeated Virginia Wesleyan, 7-6. Tracy Layfield picked up the win pitching a complete game. Layfield also had two hits and two RBIs. Michelle Brosius and Becky Keller each had two hits.

The S.S.U. softball team split a double header with Montclair State on Wednesday, May 4, in their final games of the season. Salisbury lost the first game, 5-1. Michelle Brosius ended Montclair's hopes of a shutout as she belted a homerun in the seventh inning. The Gulls downed Montclair in the nightcap, 12-9, improving their record to 12-15 overall. Nicole Urban had three hits and four RBIs, which included a two run double in the seventh. Becky Keller had four hits and two RBIs and Kara Burman had two hits and two RBIs.

Funds needed for powerlifter

Michael Watson, a former student of SSU who once wrestled here and is a founding member of Salisbury's powerlifting team, has been selected as a member of the Team USA Powerlifting squad. The team will compete in the World Championships this June in Bali, Indonesia. Watson needs help if he is to participate, however. He must raise $7000 to cover his expenses. - Dress hose, preferably not white or a light color.
- A dress which does not have a high neckline or stand-up collar. It should not show above the V-neckline on the robe. Since the academic robe has a front zipper closing, the dress will show only near the lower hem and, therefore, should be a dark color, rather than white or very light.

Tau Kappa Epsilon

My dear guests, I am Mr. Rourke, you host, Welcome to Fantasy Island. Hidelio neighbors it's time for your weekly fix, you know you want it so don't fight it. I promise it'll feel good. Did I forget to mention that I love you.

Our 53rd annual RCB banquet was a rousing success. With Margarita trains leaving every 15 minutes (or less) let's just say the night started off energized. Let's hear it for 331. Highlights of the evening include Cowboy Huff Orton receiving Frater of the semester, a heartfelt speech from Mugsy and the "Bull in the Fenwick" along with mindless blather from Newman. We also can't forget the fabulous lobster races and Dave forgetting his pants. Also thank Finster for generously escorting Squiggys date when he was unavailable. No thanx to Radar's date for ditching everyone in O.C. due to his rude behavior.

Congrats to our newest initiates into "the Bond". Also to Pi Lam for being 3-0, too bad it wasn't good enough to be bumped up and receive a bye for the playoffs. Better luck next time, kids. The Wild Irish Rose wants to apologize for the wax. Plus I'm not drunk.

Well that's all for this week, but come back next week and I'll give you some fudge. If you want a real good lei look for any man with TKE letters and you're sure to get one you'll never forget (and I ain't talkin' 'bout flowers) Stay Hard - TKE (FN).

ΠΛΦ

Pi Lambda Phi

Now that the Greek Week festivities are amongst us it is time for everyone to see how the Pi Lams and the other greeks are doing. This is a time when greeks are able to show their stuff so now it's time for everyone to see it. So come on down. The festivities will be going on all week until Sunday, ask your favorite greek and find out what is going on that day.

Well as you might have guessed, the boys of Pi Lam have made it to the softball playoffs again with an undefeated record. They are hitting hard and catching everything with ease. The best thing about it is that we are always having the the best time kickin' it to everyone.

Just as it was once said, "History is to repeat itself," the brothers had another beneficial time for Salisbury Festival. It seemed that everyone wanted one of the famous Pi Lam BBQ sandwiches. Thanks to everyone for their support and let's do it again next year. Hope everyone had fun who came out to Wellness Day on May 4. It was a fun and educational time. And thanks for the free tests, they were appreciated.

It was an unforgettable time this weekend to hear the music of the most influential bands again, live. Physical Graffiti came and did their rendition of Led Zeppelin. They looked, played and acted as the originals. Thanks comes from all to you. Keep playing and living.

On a sadder note, we must say goodbye to two graduating seniors, Derrich Beauchamp and Chris Weckor. The time you have been members have been a benefit to the fraternity. Also, our own Adam Cizeck will be transferring to Penn State for Law School. Who would have ever thought. So ladies, for all of you who know them, better say your farewells to them. Oh and Derrich and Chris are both getting married in the future. Good luck and enjoy yourselves. And the three of you remember "Not just for four years, but a lifetime." You will all be missed and thanks.

ZTA

Zeta Tau Alpha

Greek Week is here! Zeta is ready to win again! Hope to see all greeks at the events this week - quad singing on Monday along with remote control at the Flying Club, Wednesday's search and find, Thursday's quad olympics and Friday's carnival in front of the dining hall. Good luck to all. Zeta had a blast last weekend at our banquet. Hope the seniors enjoyed the slide show. Thanks goes out to Jean Marie for all your hard work and for the date party Friday night. To Danielle too for a great crab feast! In birthday wishes, two go out to Jen Buchanan on May 8 and to Kris Shartle on May 13. Finally, congratulations to Jen Steffey and Danielle Hunter and all the other greeks for your awards at the SGA award ceremony last Monday. Lastly, a special thanks to every sister in this chapter for recognizing me and the unsung hero award.

ΑΣΤ

Alpha Sigma Tau

Well SSU. . . the sisters of AST have been very busy lately with school and work. We do want to thank SAE for making "Paddy Murphy" so much fun last weekend, though.

Our raffle winner for tickets to the Orioles game is ticket number 036430. Congratulations! We would also like to send congratulations to our "Sisters of the Week" who are Eileen Mawdsley and Erica Bryson. Our "Pledge of the Week" is Clare Colgrove. Keep up the good work girls, you're doing great!

Stay tuned for next week, when we'll have news about Greek Week! Until then. . .

ΣΑΕ

Sigma Alpha Epsilon

Not since 1856 has Paddy Murphy seen a party like this! We had so much BBQ and ale that the pigs were scared and the distributors happy! All the thanks in the world go to brother hero Jeremy Magorka and the knights of the Columbus. It definitely could not have been successful without you.

The Coors Light Triathlon is over and are we tired! I must say that this (just like all other SAE events) was a great bonus for our chapter. Look out for Sigma Alpha Epsilon at the upcoming Special Olympics this weekend at the Wicomico County Stadium.

Now, talking sports and when you think of athletic, this SAE (Sports Achievement Excellence). For the reason that the first time in a long time SAE has two teams in the second and third rounds of the softball playoffs. Now that's MD Sigma at it's best!

And finally for the quote of the week: "Hey, when all else fails, count on us; it's a Sigma thing!"

Note: an error was made in last week's Flyer and I apologize. . . Phil Wright is MD Beta, not Alpha Beta.

Graduation information

the white inner lining turned out at the top, over the gold (like a collar). Gold cords would be worn under the honors hood.

3. Candidates for the bachelor's degree should come into the auditorium with the tassel on the right, hanging near the right eye. After the degrees are conferred, the tassel is shifted to the left side. The signal for shifting the tassel will be given by the President (and/or your faculty marshal).

4. Candidates for the master's degree should place the tassel at the left front of the mortarboard prior to entering the auditorium and should not lift it.

5. Master's degree candidates will wear the robe, but will carry the hood over the left arm until they reach the stage, where it will be placed on the candidate who should face the audience and bend down a little. Faculty marshals will give you more specific information.

6. Graduates will receive graduation picture information from Chappell Studio, Inc. This information will arrive at your permanent address in the near future.

7. Candidates should not chew gum or tobacco.

21. Graduation Decorum

Graduation ceremonies are, by their very nature, festive occasions. The festivity manifests itself in many ways including: the dress of the students and faculty adorned in academic regalia and the warmth, joy and satisfaction of accomplishment. The ceremonies are also marked by seriousness where the actual conferring of degrees signifies long hard work on the part of everyone involved: students, faculty, administrators, parents and spouses. As a consequence of the serious nature of the ceremony, students are expected to maintain a measure of decorum consonant with the occasion. Applause and other recognition of the conferring of degrees should be limited to a joint effort at the conclusion of each graduation group, (e.g., B.S., B.A., etc.).

Sorry brothers, didn't mean to offend you. And remember, "SAE; not just a badge and a card, but a fraternity for life."

ΦΜ

Phi Mu

On Sat., May 7, Phi Mu initiated six new sisters. They are Mandy Delano, Diana Hall, Karen Merrill, Michelle Portney, Melissa Schragar and Tori Siegel. Congratulations to all of you.

Congratulations also go out to Jessica Dodge, Kelly Nelson and Jen Straw for the awards they received last Monday. Happy Belated Birthday to Christina!

Also, on Saturday, the sisters went to Salisbury Indoor Golf for velcro jumping and pillow bouncing. Thanks to those people who came along with us. It was a great time.

Good luck to everyone participating in Greek Week. GO PHI MU!
